

FutureMe

Immediate insight into the interests, motivations and potential of your employees

Career advice guidance

Which work fields suit your employees?

Clear and transparent report

Career advice guidance

To use talent sustainably, it's important that your employees know their qualities and motivations. With that knowledge, your employees can steer their own careers and discover the position in which they can make a difference. Whether this is in their current position or in a completely different role.

The FutureMe is an ideal starting point for a (new) step. Employees complete a range of relatively easy tests that measure what they are capable of and what they enjoy. Online, quick and easy.

Available at two educational levels (senior secondary vocational education and higher professional education/university education).

Clear and transparent report

The FutureMe report shows which three work fields best suit your employees and why. Work fields in which their ideas, wishes and qualities come into their own. They can immediately see which work fields correspond with their interests, motivations and competencies.

The FutureMe gives your employees a frame of reference when making Career choices

FutureMe

Interests, motivations and potential

Employees perform best when their work corresponds with their strengths and motivations. The FutureMe establishes the work fields that suit them best. All relevant characteristics - interests, motivations and potential - are taken into account in combined recommendations. You can therefore be certain that your people receive reliable and well-founded advice.

Writing

This might include professions like: writer, editor, translator.

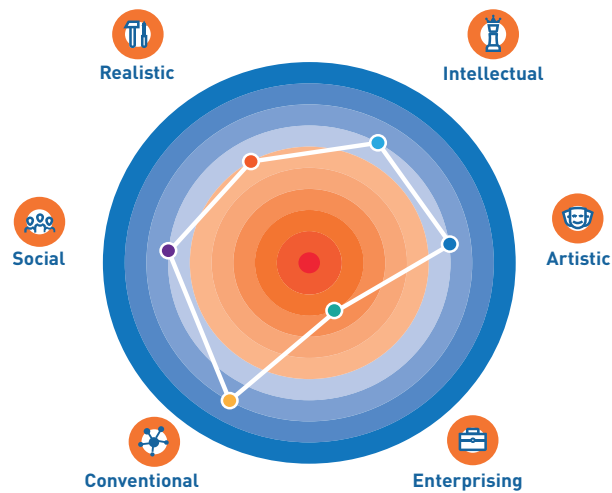

Several professions are given as an example of the most suitable work fields. Your employees can then continue to brainstorm about other possible professions or work.

What does the FutureMe measure?

Interests

People who are excited by their work are more productive and have more job satisfaction. The FutureMe provides a clear overview of their work interests.

Potential

Competencies, specific qualities, emerge from personality and are an important part of someone's potential to do something well or less well. The FutureMe shows your employees their strongest competencies.

Would you like to know more about the FutureMe?

info@hfmtalentindex.com

Motivations

To fulfil their potential, your employees must know what motivates them, what gives them energy. What really makes them go the extra mile. The FutureMe reveals their motivations.

